PROLOGUE

The Viruses would burst out from the reservoirs where they had been incubated, they would realize that unlike before, there are not enough hosts left among the lower floras and animals and that the various eco barriers and obstacles had been greatly removed by the humans in their rigorous exploitations of plants and animal kingdoms.

They were finally out and on the move aided by the winds and actively looking for a suitable host. What suitable host would be better now? They would finally settle for the Humans themselves.
